

IAN SAVAGE

Ian Savage has been a member of the faculty of both the Department of Economics and the Transportation Center at Northwestern University since 1986.

His research has been concentrated in two areas: urban public transportation, and transportation safety. He has published widely on the economics of transit finances and operations. He has conducted research into the safety performance, and the effectiveness of safety regulations, in most modes of transportation -- with particular emphasis on the trucking and railroad industries.

4/2022